9th INTERNATIONAL
CONFERENCE ON

INDOOR POSITIONING
AND INDOOR NAVIGATION

The advent of terrestrial positioning systems, the internet of things and human sensor networks provides new navigation functionalities and sets a novel paradigm for indoor positioning and navigation solutions. The environment, where navigation technology is expected to work, has extended to challenging indoor spaces and to the context of goods and personal mobility. Globally there is no overall and easy solution. Every year, IPIN gathers over 400 industrial and academic experts in informatics, electronics and surveying to address this challenge. In the footsteps of our Japanese colleagues, we welcome you in France to IPIN 2018 for its ninth edition to discuss in person scientific and industrial matters, experience geolocation competitions beyond the conference venue and enjoy the historical and cultural heritage of Nantes.
